feeling for the vanquished party, they would not feel bound to make any return for the assistance so timely rendered. The policy of Peking has always been to play off the Western Powers one against another, under any circumstances, has China shown any political gratitude?

The French were no doubt somewhat disgusted at the apocryphal lies made up by the veteran mandarin in Germany, and resolved to preserve a little self-respect by not following the Teutonic example. Hence we find Roter silent for about a fortnight concerning the movements of His Excellency Li, until he has now reached England. In London he has been quietly received and will be treated as a State guest. A mansion has been taken by the Government for his residence, and a British Vice-Consul on leave was to be deputed to show His Excellency around during his few weeks' stay in England. No doubt everything will be done to entertain him, and make his stay pleasant. He will be invited to Hatfield by the Premier, and will be taken to Portsmouth to see the Fleet. Probably he will also witness a review of the troops, and will be pretty certain to visit the great manufacturing centres of Manchester, Birmingham, Leeds, &c. But it is evident that no semi-royal honours are to be paid to the so-called "Bismarck of China." It is to be presumed that the British Government will not once forget that Li is a member of the most corrupt and most arrogant Government in the world, a Government that still claims superiority for its puppet monarch over all the crowned heads of Europe. They will therefore be careful to do nothing that may be construed by the Envoy into an admission of his preposterous claim, which should long ago have been finally disposed of by compelling the Emperor to receive Western Princes at Peking on terms of equality. The suzerainty of the sovereign cannot be preserved very long, it is to be hoped, when the stream of the railway whistle reaches that frothy capital, and the stream of travellers invades its evil smelling streets.

Chlorine is reported to be raging at Peking. From noon on Saturday to noon yesterday only two cases of plague were reported.

The delivery of the French mail was begun at 3.35 p.m. yesterday.

There were 2,635 visitors to the City Hall Museum, last week, of whom 204 were Europeans.

A number of German officers arrived in Shanghai on the 16th July from Hankow to take over the garrison duties at Wusong forts.

The steamer Glennon, from London and Straits, left Singapore for this port yesterday evening, the 10th instant.

The N. P. steamer Brant left at 10 a.m. for Yokohama and will sail for this port on the 6th instant, via Kobe, Nagasaki, and Shanghai.

The Volunteer concert will take place on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. In case the weather is bad the concert will be given in the Volunteer Institute.

The Chia Yen Pao (Shanghai) is informed from Peking that there is a talk, suggested by certain officials, of selling Tibet to England and the New Dominion to Russia.

The M. M. steamer McBorne, with the last homeward freighter mail, after leaving Saigon and when near the mouth of the river, met with an accident to her steering gear, which delayed her forty-eight hours.

The American barque St. Katherine, which left Shanghai on the 15th July for Vancouver, returned to Wusong on the 16th with her ballast cargo, and encountered the typhoon between there and Japan.

A new evening paper is to be started at Shanghai next month, the sole proprietorship of the Japan Gazette. It is reported that a new morning paper, to be established by a syndicate, will make its appearance in a few weeks.
